Lesson 2

Hello Learner

Below is the extract that I read out in the video.

An extract from Orangeboy by William Patrice Lawrence: -

Sonya said, 'Try it.'

I took a bite of hot dog and the claggy bread stuck to the roof of my mouth.

'You like?'

'Mmph'

I forced myself to swallow. A big lump of mustard dropped to the bottom of my stomach, bread and pink sausage churning up together. My gut jumped, ready to seal itself shut. Sonya was looking at me, so I took another bite and she nodded her approval.

Remember that these writing exercises are just for fun. There are no hard or fast rules, no rights or wrongs here. Read over what you've written and the more you do the more you will see the mistakes that you've made and correct them. When you are happy with what you've written, get your dictionary and check your work for spelling errors. If you really take pride in your writing then you'll want it to be the very best that it can be. But first and foremost, grab your pencil and paper and let it flow!

Let's get writing!
