Lesson 3

Hello Learner

Below are the extracts that I read out in the video.

An extract from Born to Run, written by Michael Morpurgo: -

'Part of Patrick's walk to school, to St Thomas' Junior School on Porthcressa Road was along the canal, past the brown sauce factory which somehow smelled both sweet and dour at the same time. That walk along the canal where the barges chugged by, where the ducks dipped and drank, was the only part of going to school that Patrick looked forward to at all.'

An extract from Escape by Linwood Barclay: -

'The van was flying. Jeff Conroy stared out the window, nose to the glass, breathless. Seconds earlier, they'd been driving along on solid ground, but now their rusty old van was sailing through the sky.'

I'd really like to encourage you to start writing more today. Your task in this lesson is to create a story opener based on the image but do feel free to write a complete short story. Looking at some of the work that has been submitted I think you're all more than capable. Remember that these writing exercises are just for fun. There are no hard or fast rules, no rights or wrongs here. Read over what you've written and the more you do the more you will see the mistakes that you've made and correct them. When you are happy with what you've written, get your dictionary and check your work for spelling errors. If you really take pride in your writing then you'll want it to be the very best that it can be. But first and foremost, grab your pencil and paper and let it flow!

Let's get writing!
